Potlikker Capital

Lolita is a passionate changemaker that is dedicated to bringing resources, support, and knowledge to people and communities that have been systemically and historically excluded. She brings over 25 years of progressive experience in both the nonprofit and for-profit sectors. She worked in the banking industry for 14 years where she developed expertise in finance, investment banking, and management. In addition to her financial role, her work included cultivating and building relationships with community leaders and advocating for programs providing financial literacy, consulting and mentoring. Her passion for philanthropy led her to a career change working in the nonprofit sector where she led donor outreach, cultivation, fundraising, and community and business engagement efforts. Lolita's career path then led her to the sector of impact investing where she could further champion positive social, racial, and environmental systems change. Lolita is committed to building strong and resilient communities. Recently aligning her passion for food system justice, she became one of the founding coalition members of the Washtenaw Black Farmers Fund. In her current role, as the Director of Investor Relations at Potlikker Capital, she leads the fund design and modeling, connecting with mission-aligned investors to re-imagine how their investment can support the resiliency of BIPOC farming communities nationally.

Lolita serves as a member of the Sustainable Agriculture Food Systems Funders Board of Directors. Her other volunteer efforts have included serving on local boards and committees that have worked to address the need for at-risk youth, access to healthy and affordable food, financial literacy, and supporting women's empowerment. Lolita received her MBA from Eastern Michigan University.
